Answer to Lines on Tally Tolu.
Ah, ha! young man, you are now in town,
And nothing in do but act like a clown;
You clasp your arms around my neck,
And far beneath a low down neck,
You're coming to do but drink and chew,
And shoot off your mouth a little too;
You'd best beware how you insult the fair,
For your impudence is more than we can bear;
If you only knew what the girls think of you,
You'd get criticism on your tally too.

Tally on Babies.
The little girl cannot play with her doll,
Nor the boy whiz his top, nor the mother wash her offspring with soap, except at an expense of from one third to one half of their cost for the domestic privilege. [Laughter.] If the mother gives her child castor-oil she pays down 148 per cent. ad valorem [laughter]; if the child does not enjoy the dose, there is a twenty-five per cent. howl as the recipient of the contents of its tender stomach. And though she "wash it with niter and take it to much soap, yet the inequity is marked before me, with the Lord," for the soap is taxed forty per centum! God help the child!

Mr. Townsend, of Illinois. How about candy?

Mr. Cox, of New York. I am coming to that in a moment, my honey. [Great laughter.]

If she wraps the little dear in a plain bleached cotton night-shirt, it has a nightmare of five and a half cents per square yard specific; [laughter]; when the child awakes in the morning fretful, she combats its little head at thirty-five cents ad valorem; [laughter]; if she would amuse it, she rolls it over a Brussels carpet at ninety cents per square yard, or gives it confectionery made of refined sugar at four cents a pound tax, and twenty-five per cent. ad valorem; if it tears its little pants, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. Kelley] sees them up with spot thread taxed at three quarters of its value. [Laughter.] Why, it she used a shingle to bring the little "toddling, wee thing" to its senses, the honorable gentleman can recall, the cost would be enhanced at the rate of seventeen per cent. taxation. [Laughter.]

If the youngster has a patriotic inclination on our Fourth of July, his fire crackers are taxed as a patriotic luxury at 81 extra a box, and the hunting which furnishes the flag, tho' but twenty-three cents a pound, costs 121 per cent. extra, while the hand plays on instruments taxed at thirty cents. She takes him to the menagerie to study natural history. There is the zebra, symbolic of a mixed ad valorem and specific [laughter]; and the stately giraffe, high protection [laughter]; the royal tiger, and unicorn of Holy Writ at twenty per cent. And the procession of elephants! Every one twenty per cent. True, Junco, for purposes not to be mentioned, is excluded by the affidavit of a consistent protectionist! but the log chain that holds his huge legs binds the monster in protective chains! [Laughter.]—[Extract from Tariff speech of S. S. Cox, in Congress.]

J. M. Thomas, an elder in the Christian Church at Paris, writes to the Apollon Times of Bro. Barnes as follows: "He is a Christian of high attainments; I have been wondering if our accurate statements were of more worth than his spirit of holiness. I recommended our preaching brethren to go and light their torches at Barnes' altar and avoid errors, but catch his spirit; it is beautiful; most powerfully does he present the love of God, most forcibly deny, as we do, the creeds and partitions of the religious world." Elder Thomas sums up Mr. Barnes' doctrine about as follows: Upon the statement, ability to accept the salvation provided, personal freedom in Christ, growth in grace and knowledge, authority of the Scriptures, he is a Disciple; in the manner of baptism, he believes he is a Baptist; as to a final perseverance, he is a Presbyterian; in regard to the condition of souls after death, a Catholic. His drunkard that lives and dies a drunkard, is purged by purgatorial fires. He is, with many of our best men, an adventist; he believes in a real hell, old style, has two classes of Christians, the high-life Christian that shall wear a crown, and the low-life Christian who shall be saved as by fire.

Dr. J. R. McKee confessed on Sunday night. Before making the confession he whispered something in Mr. Barnes' ear, which he (Mr. Barnes) afterwards explained to the audience was, that "the brother said he was a farmer and owned race-horses, and wanted to know if that made any difference." "I told him to come on," said Mr. Barnes, "and Jesus would accept him, race-horses and all, and if he is not saved I am willing to be damned in his place." He then spoke of a whiskey-seller at Stanford, whom "Jesus had accepted, whiskey barrels and all."—[Midway Clipper.]

"PRAISE THE LORD."

VERSAILLES, May 10th, 1882.

Dear Interior:
I am glad the friendly senior editor was away when last Friday's paper came out. I want my thoughts of him always to be kind ones. I do not know how even friendship could have stood the strain of being represented to an intelligent community as a lover of "camel's legs." What they supposed I meant by that expression of my preference, it is vain to surmise. But I wrote, "If like camels legs," I. e. less than "guinea's," little as I like them. I am not easily moved, but I ventured on a feeble groan, when wife read the lacinated sentence to me. No, dear readers, I do not like camels legs. Why should I? Am I not supposed to be crazy now? Has not Prof. McGarvey given me only the brief period of two years before dying in a Lunatic Asylum? I shudder to think how these prophets of ill omen will snatch at this premonitory symptom of insanity, in a hankering after "camel's legs." Suffer this one correction and let the minor exasperations go. I can bear them.

Beautiful Woodford has been called by an enthusiastic admirer, the Asperagus but of the "blue grass"—supposing that to be the "garden spot of the world." It certainly is lovely in this Spring time of beauty. It is like riding through a park nearly all the way between Midway and Versailles, as any one will testify who has driven along that charming eight miles of turnpike. The dear Georgetown friends sent us off in the same hand-some style that they had entertained us. As they "welcomed the coming," so they "aped the parting guests." The LORD bless them for generous hospitality, not to be easily forgotten. The meeting here began Thursday night of last week. Only one service more, therefore, before the close of the first week's labor. Save a children's meeting, one of the most successful ones we have known, in which 110 of the "little fellows" confessed the Savior, there has been but little harvesting in Versailles. 126 for soul, 9 for body, is the total to this (Wednesday) night. The congregations are all that one could ask in number and respectful attention. Of course we trust the LORD for a glorious ingathering, though we may have to wait a little while for it.

Our quarters are delightful, the Woodford House, kept by Mr. Dean. It is the clearest, best kept village hotel I ever stopped at, and I have been in a great many in my time. The cookery is simply delicious, and I am glad to chronicle it, for I would not have it supposed for a moment, that I am so lost in the contemplation of heavenly things that I don't know something good to eat, when I see it. On the contrary, I plead with all my heart for a religion that enjoys with intense relish every innocent enjoyment. I will have nothing to do with a religion, so severed from earth, as to be indifferent to good cookery, clean beds, and polite servants. Indeed, I hold tenaciously, that no one can enjoy the good things of this life without a sting in them, except the Christian who walks in constant fellowship with Jesus. And because I aim above all things to do this, good food tastes doubly good, lovely sights appear in double loveliness, and music strikes the ear with double sweetness of harmony. And nothing is a maure. Table comforts are not abused to the verge of dyspeptic horrors, and other cups of earthly joy, like Cowper's tea, are "emptied that cheer, but not inebriate." PRAISE THE LORD for this sweet capacity of earthly joy brought in with other greater blessings by the dear Redeemer's love.

O! that my dear readers, instead of substituting any of these things for Jesus, in the vain hope of extracting good from them, or filling up "the aching void" with them, would only take them as the "things added unto you"—after the "Kingdom of heaven has been set up in the heart and life." Then would those things that only smart and sting, when thrust in Jesus' place, become joyous adjuncts to our joy in HIM, without whom every thing, whether innocent or guilty in itself, becomes a life long disappointment.

Versailles has a beautiful new Court House, or rather one remodeled from the old one, and seeming entirely new. A handsome audience room, is the one in which the services are held. Several heavy fires in late years have made room for handsome rows of business houses, and the village is greatly improved since my visit in 1870. Ever in Jesus.

GEO. O. BARNES.

"Why," said he, as he drank the liquor and gagged, "I shall never be able to look a dog in the face without being sick. To think of that beautiful girl kissing that dog! If she had seen the dog as I did that afternoon, with some other dogs, she would faint. The dogs were pulling at a cow's tail that they found in a vacant lot, and fighting over it, and the tail was an old one that had fallen from a butcher's wagon. O, see that my grave is kept green, and put an iron fence around it to keep dogs away."—[Peck's Sun.]

A SENTIMENTAL MURDERER.—It was a sentimental Georgia murderer who, having been sentenced to be hanged on June 30, begged that he might be permitted to choke a day earlier, because he didn't want to suffer on the day set for Gautreaux's hanging. The judge was accommodating. —[Chicago Times.]

"Banged Hair."

One of the many abominable outcroppings of total depravity is to be seen in the modern, fashionable and idiotic custom of "banging the hair." Little children, young ladies, middle-aged women, and even old women have adopted the ungodly "craze." In 1 Cor. 1: 15, the Holy Ghost declares: "If a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her, for her hair is given on her for a covering." And yet Christian women will in direct disobedience to Holy Writ, cut off the beautiful locks to a certain length, and then paste and force it to grow down over the forehead in the most unnatural manner, thus biding that which God never designed should be hidden. Alas! that things have come to such a phase that the slightest beck and call of Fiend Fashion is obeyed more faithfully than are the plain commands and exhortations of the Lord. Are our Christian sisters aware of the fact that the habit of "banging the hair" used to be the mark of prostitution in our cities? Away with such fashion! Read 1 Cor. 2, 9.—[Ex.]

THE WHOOP COURSE.—The friends of Mrs. L. E. Kouns, who was lost on the ill-fated Golden City, were greatly shocked last week on discovering that the body that was sent here two weeks ago as that of that unfortunate lady was that of another person. We learn that when the remains arrived it was thought best that her husband, Capt. Kouns, should not see them before internment. The next day or two thereafter the jewelry found upon the remains brought here was received by Capt. K., but which he failed to recognize as that of his wife. This led to a disinterment of the body, and it was then discovered that the lady taken for Mrs. Kouns was between forty and fifty years of age, and that she had lost four of her front teeth; and it was well known that the teeth of Mrs. Kouns were perfectly sound at the time when she went aboard the boat. It is supposed that the remains found were those of Mrs. Dr. Monahan, of Jackson, Ohio, who, with her husband, was also lost at the burning of the boat.—[Ashland (Ky.) Express.]

"Mister," began a small boy, as he entered a Woodward avenue grocery yesterday, "ma bought some mackerel here last night." "Yes," "And in making change you gave her—" "No, I didn't! I haven't had a quarter with a hole in it for a month." "But ma says you gave her a—" "Don't believe it—don't believe it! I remember now; I gave her a half dollar and a nickel." "Ma says you gave her a gold piece for a penny, and here it is." "Good gracious alive! and so I did—so I did, I remember now that I gave her a dollar bill and a lot of small change. Bub, what's your name, and do you think you can eat three sticks of lemon candy? Ah! it does me good to find honesty and reward it."

The circus run by W. C. Culp, son-in-law of Barnum, has one unique characteristic. Nomenclature or family is sold in the tents. He declares that, while clearing his show of swindlers, he has concluded to make a clean sweep. "There are circuses with big bank accounts," he says, "who have made their money by actually robbing their patrons. They used to swindle on the seats, but that is done away with now entirely, or nearly so. Of course I am not at liberty to mention names, but I could astonish you by designating shows, the managers of which have made their money by partnership with bunco men and other gamblers."

Two Irishmen fighting side by side agreed that the one who was first wounded should at once be carried off by his comrade. Soon one poor fellow cried out that he was shot in the leg, when the other took him upon his back and was carrying him across an open plain, when a chance shot passing swiftly along took off the head of the wounded man without the hearer knowing any thing about it. An officer riding by called out: "Why, where are you going with that headless man on your back?" Upon this, Pat laid down his burden, and looking at it exclaimed: "By jabsers, he told me it was his leg!"—[Ex.]

The Columbus Beecon asks if we desire the defeat of Henry. We answer, Yes. It then asks if we intend to support J. C. H. We answer, No. A vote for Jacob would be endorsement of political prostitution, just as a vote for Henry would be endorsement of debauchery and immorality. And we decline to endorse either.—[Breckinridge News.]

Mr. William Gowau, of Lawrence, Mass., whose creditors four years ago accepted his offer to settle an indebtedness of $50,000 for 40 per cent., has just informed them that he is prepared and willing to pay the remaining $30,000 with interest.

The way to reach the North Pole is to advance by a zig-zag approach, building huts and depots at available points, and maintaining telegraphic communication with the busy world. There have been enough wild dashes at certain disappointment or death.

STOP AND CONSIDER.—Are you troubled with a weakness in any part of the body? Have you weak lungs, or is your heart's action unsteady and irregular? Are you suffering from ill-health, caused by weak use of the urinary or digestive organs? Remember, Brown's Iron Bitters will cure you and fully restore both mind and body to their normal condition. It quickly strengthens the parts affected.

Tom, Henry a Bolter.

Captain Tom. Henry was a member of the Kentucky House of Representatives for the term of 1875-7. The election of a United States Senator was pending. Captain Henry favored the election of Gen. John S. Williams, and was active in promoting his interests—all of which he had a perfect right to do. But a caucus of the democratic members was held, and James B. Beck was regularly nominated. The Mayville Eagle tells the following: "After Beck's triumphant election over all filibustering, disorganizing tactics, and had become the regularly nominated candidate of the democratic party, Captain Henry saw fit to signalize and render conspicuous his animosity to Mr. Beck, and his revolt against the decision of the caucus by which he was pledged to abide, by refusing to vote for Mr. Beck. He was not alone in this, as some ten or twelve other malcontents joined with him in this repudiation of their obligations."

Since the 1st of January last, forty-one criminals have suffered the penalty of death administered by Judge Lynch. Hitherto lynching has been confined almost exclusively to the South and to the Western frontier, but of these forty-one cases there have been but six on the frontier and sixteen in the South, leaving nineteen in the Northern States, where the courts are supposed to administer justice. In Colorado, where the influences of rough frontier life still linger, nine men have been lynched, but what shall we say of eight men in Kansas, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Minnesota, where justice is presumably as complete as it is in any part of the country? What can we say except that justice is deficient and that people have an idea that criminals can escape?—[Chicago Tribune.]

My indignation is yearly aroused by the needless sacrifice of some noble oak or elm, and especially of the white pine, the grandest tree in the woods, which I would not exchange for Oriental palms. My thanks will be due to the public school when it is to plant a group of trees in my honor. I could ask no better memorial. I have always admired the good taste of the Sakakis Indians, around Sebago lake, who, when their chief died, dug around a beech tree, swaying it down, and placed his body in the rent, and then let the noble tree fall back into its original place—a green and beautiful monument for the son of the forest.—[Whittier.]

A lady, a widow possessed of youth, beauty and wealth, who lives a short distance in the country, started home in her phaeton the other evening. About a mile from town a man suddenly emerged from a cluster of trees by the roadside and attempted to stop her horse by grasping the bridle. She quickly drew a small Smith & Wesson, fired two shots, and put the fellow to flight. Of course we can give no names, for fear of the Turner pistol law. But how could a lady be indebted for carrying concealed weapons since they have no pistol pockets in their pan—iers?—[Lexington Evening News.]

The Dublin Freeman says that a full feed of hay to horses, following the feeding of concentrated food, is wasteful. In order to secure best results, hay should be fed at first and the concentrated food afterwards; which leaves it to become fully digested, with no danger of being "crowded away," or out of the performance of its desired purpose.

Professor to classical student: "If Atlas supported the world, who supported Atlas?" Student: "The question has often been asked, but never, so far as I am aware, satisfactorily answered. I have always been of the opinion that Atlas must have married a rich girl, and got the support from her father."

Only about one out of fifteen of the American girls who go abroad to become great singers or actresses are ever heard of after returning home. The other fourteen marry Italian Counts, and, when night comes, are too busy taking care of the monkeys and meddling tamboorines to hunt up their old acquaintances.

A gentleman in Rapids Parish Louisiana, cultivated one thousand acres of cotton last year, and four hundred in Bermuda grass. The cotton yielded him a net return of about $1,000 less than the grass. The cotton was cultivated with severe manual labor, while the grass was handled entirely by machinery.

"Lawrence, my dear," said his wife, wreathed in smiles, "I wish you had been to church this morning. Mr. Jones was very interesting, and when he prayed for the absent ones—" "Well, that accounts for it, then. I haven't caught such a string of fish for a year as I did this morning."

At a recent auction sale in Baltimore, a half-dollar of 1797, well preserved, brought $50; a silver dollar of 1794, $55; a three-cent silver piece of 1773, brilliant proof, $1.50; a half-dollar of 1794, $3.50, and a copper cent of 1793, $3.75.
